Erudite Scholarship FAQs

Q1: The “NYCU Operation Direction for the Trial Run of Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students” takes effect in academic year 2023. I resume my studies in semester 1 of academic year 2023. Can I apply for the Erudite Scholarship?

A1: In accordance with Article 2 of the “NYCU Operation Direction for the Trial Run of Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students”, the Erudite Scholarship is available for new first-year students accepted by and enrolled in a NYCU PhD program and active second-year NYCU PhD students. New first-year students are students accepted by or enrolled in a NYCU PhD program in academic year 2023 (including students with early admission and students in direct pursuit of admission to a NYCU PhD program), and existing students are active PhD students in the second or lower year. Hence, the Erudite Scholarship is also available for student resuming their studies in semester 1 of academic year 2023. However, if any one of the circumstances as specified in Article 5 occurs in academic year 2023, students will be disqualified from the Erudite Scholarship without reclamation.

Q2: I took the NYCU PhD program entrance examination for academic year 2023 but enrolled in a NYCU program in semester 2 of academic year 2022. How much can I get from the Erudite Scholarship?

A2: In accordance with Article 3 of the “NYCU Operation Direction for the Trial Run of Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students”, the amount of the Erudite Scholarship covers their tuition and fees for the first and second academic years (subject to the actual amount of tuition and fees as announced by NYCU). However, this amount does not cover credit fees for the Teacher Education Program, individual instruction fees for music majors, and various mandatory fees (e.g., insurance, accommodations, internet service, sports facilities, and others). Students with early admission in semester 2 of academic year 2022 are also counted as first-year students accepted by and enrolled on a NYCU PhD program for academic year 2023. If no violation of any part of Article 5 is detected, the scholarship they receive will be that to cover their tuition and fees in the first and second academic year for their study in the PhD program.

Q3: I was directly admitted to a NYCU PhD program in semester 2 of academic year 2022. How much can I get from the Erudite Scholarship?

A3: The “NYCU Operation Direction for the Trial Run of Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students” takes effect in academic year 2023. It aims to incentivize new first-year students accepted by and enrolled in a NYCU PhD program and active second-year NYCU PhD students. Students directly admitted to a NYCU PhD program in semester 2 of academic year 2022 are students admitted to NYCU in academic year 2022. Hence, they are not new PhD students of academic year 2023. If no violation of any part of Article 5 is detected, they are eligible for the Erudite Scholarship that covers the tuition and fees of semesters 1 and 2 of academic year 2023 (subject to the actual amount of tuition and fees as announced by NYCU). However, this amount does not cover credit fees for the Teacher Education Program, individual instruction fees for music majors, and various mandatory fees (e.g., insurance, accommodations, internet service, sports facilities, and others).

Q4: I am an active second-year NYCU PhD student who has gapped before academic year 2023. Am I qualified for the Erudite Scholarship?

A4: In accordance with Article 5 of the “NYCU Operation Direction for the Trial Run of Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students”, students who gap during the scholarship period will be disqualified without reclamation. The NYCU Erudite Scholarship for PhD Students begins in academic 2023 to incentivize students enrolling in a NYCU PhD program from academic year 2023. Hence, students who have gapped before academic year 2023 are also qualified for the Scholarship, and only students who gap in or after academic year 2023 will be disqualified.

Q5: I have applied for a tuition and fees exemption. Am I still qualified for the Erudite Scholarship?

A5: The amount of the NYCU Erudite Scholarship covers the tuition and fees in the academic year of first and second years of the PhD programs (subject to the actual amount of tuition and fees as announced by NYCU). However, this amount does not cover credit fees for the Teacher Education Program, individual instruction fees for music majors, and various mandatory fees (e.g., insurance, accommodations, internet service, sports facilities, and others). Hence, the amount of the NYCU Erudite Scholarship will be the actual amount of tuition and fees after the exemption. If the actual amount after exemption is NT$0, the amount of the NYCU Erudite Scholarship will also be NT$0.
